REDACTED -PERSONAL PRIVACY

currently works at the Riley Leather Company tannery. He has worked there for 39 years, and has done "everything."

The majority of the waste comes from initial fleshings (animal matter).

The tannery uses formaldehyde and solvents. REDACTED -PERSONAL PRIVACY claimed not to know specifics of solvent types, but knew that all tanneries use them and that they are called various names. The solvents come in barrels.

Wastes from the tannery go into troughs. In the past, in general, wastes such as those in the troughs would be discharged onto the land.

All of east Woburn was dumping area for tanneries. Old trimmings, fleshings, and patent leather were deposited near routes 128 and 93.

REDACTED -PERSONAL PRIVACY

stated that he is a lawyer. Ed Kaine is currently the chemist for the tannery, and a Mr. Jones knows much about operations, also.

The wetlands property is being dumped on by "gypsy" dumpers, not area residents or businesses. REDACTED -PERSONAL PRIVACY has seen barrels, boxes, and trash on this property. He does not know what kind of barrels he saw or what was in them. REDACTED -PERSONAL PRIVACY claims such rubbish is from a handful of offenders.

REDACTED -PERSONAL

REDACTED - PERSONAL PRIVACY sprayed malathion for the City of Woburn's anti-mosquito program for two or three years 20 to 25 years ago. Every night the entire town was fogged. His company's name was Whitman Insect Control and Equipment, and it was contracted by the city.

REDACTED - PERSONAL PRIVACY is not familiar with the dirt access road. He did not spray along the railroad tracks.

Pesticide was purchased in 55-gallon drums from Niagara Chemical Co. (probably from Concord, Massachusetts) and Baird & McGuire Co. The empty used barrels were sold to Whitney Barrel in Woburn. He doesn't know what Whitney did with the barrels.

After REDACTED - PERSONAL PRIVACY two- or three-year involvement with spraying, the town bought his equipment and took over the spraying. The town purchased its malathion from REDACTED - PERSONAL PRIVACY and Niagara Chemical Co.

Other possible contacts are: Dan Carrigan, Frank Ryan, and Joe Pepe (phonetic).

RICHARD SOUSA

Telephone Interviews
Conducted by Arthur Jankowski, TechLaw, Inc.
on 8/10/87 and 3/22/88
Phone: (617) 272-9279

NOTE: Mr. Sousa was previously interviewed by investigators for Attorney Jan Schlichtmann. These additional interviews covered topics not discussed in the previous investigation and consisted of questions approved by Barbara Newman, EPA Region I. For further information, see Schlichtmann's private investigator reports.

Mr. Sousa provided information as follows:

Mr. Sousa worked for Whitney Barrel Company (Whitney Barrel) in Woburn, Massachusetts, as a laborer from approximately 1970 to 1975.

Whitney Barrel collected used barrels for refurbishing from the following companies:

- Gillette: provided barrels from plants in Andover and Boston, Massachusetts; the barrels contained "harmless substances such as peanut oil and perfume.
- George Mann: Mr. Sousa did not know what substances were contained in barrels from this company.
- Baird and McGuire: provided barrels from plant in Holbrook, Massachusetts; these barrels contained residues of malathion and other chemicals.
- A leather tannery: barrels were provided from a tannery in "Somersworth." NOTE: Mr. Sousa believed that Somersworth is in Massachusetts; further research indicated that there is no Somersworth in Massachusetts, but there is one in New Hampshire.

Usually, Whitney Barrel trucks were used by Whitney Barrel employees to pick up barrels to be reconditioned from other companies. Sometimes these other companies would deliver the barrels themselves, although Mr. Sousa could not recall which companies would do so.

Occasionally, a "middleman" or intermediate barrel company would be involved in the transfer of barrels. Other barrel companies would trade containers with Whitney Barrel, depending on the needs of the different barrel companies. Some of the barrel companies involved were:

- Roach Brothers, Lowell, MA;
- Woburn Barrel Company, New Boston Street, North Woburn, MA;
- E.C. Whitney, Wilmington, MA;
- Kingston Steel, Plaistow, MA.

Mr. Sousa did not know which companies supplied these barrel companies with containers.

Mr. Sousa suggested we try to contact Ronnie Knight, although he did not know where Mr. Knight can be located. Most of his other co-workers died at an early age, such as Bobby Dekow, Tommy Clark, and Mr. Letham (phonetic). Mr. Sousa did not know of anyone else to contact.

REDACTED - PERSONAL

England Plastics Corporation, Woburn, Massachusetts (NEP).

Discussion about Whitney Barrel Company:

NEP had barrels refurbished by the Whitney Barrel Company on a small number of occasions; REDACTED - PERSONAL PRIVACY does not know if PTD had dealings with Whitney; NEP sent old solvent and plasticizer barrels to Whitney to be cleaned.

REDACTED - PERSONAL PRIVACY is familiar with Whitney property because he drove past it to work every day.

REDACTED - PERSONAL PRIVACY was on Whitney property once during 1979 or 1980 after Whitney's barrel-cleaning operation had shutdown and the company was merely selling scrap metal; REDACTED - PERSONAL PRIVACY noticed an odor about the building; a trench originating inside the building extended outside behind the building; REDACTED - PERSONAL PRIVACY does not know the purpose of the trench, but recalls that it had liquid in it.

Whitney stored clean barrels in front of the building; there would be hundreds of these refurbished barrels stacked up at one time.

While driving past Whitney property in the early 1970's (at about the time of his switch from PTD to NEP), ^{REDACTED - PERSONAL PRIVACY} noticed a truck loaded with barrels driving away from the back of Whitney's building toward the tree line behind Whitney property; ^{REDACTED - PERSONAL PRIVACY} ^{REDACTED - PERSONAL PRIVACY} assumed the truck was heading into the trees; ^{REDACTED - PERSONAL PRIVACY} did not witness the return of the truck or any off-loading of barrels.

^{REDACTED - PERSONAL PRIVACY} never witnessed Whitney open a drum, dump the contents of a drum on the ground, or dispose of a drum.

Discussion about Murphy's Waste Oil Co.:

Murphy's Waste Oil cut back on the types of oil it accepts for reclamation because of worries about possible oil contamination.

Owens Corning et al. -- Bankruptcy Information

On October 5, 2000, Owens Corning, CDC Corporation, Engineered Yarns America, Inc., Falcon Foam Corporation, Integrex, Fibreboard Corporation, Exterior Systems, Inc., Integrex Ventures LLC, Integrex Professional Services LLC, Integrex Supply Claim Solutions LLC, Integrex Testing Systems LLC, HOMExperts LLC, Jefferson Holding, Inc., Owens-Corning Fiberglas Technology Inc., Owens Corning HT, Inc., Owens-Corning Overseas Holdings, Inc., Owens Corning Remodeling Systems, LLC and Soltech, Inc. (each a "Debtor" and collectively the "Debtors") filed petitions for reorganization under Chapter 11 of the United States Bankruptcy Code with the United States Bankruptcy Court for the District of Delaware. Click Here for a list of each of the Debtor's bankruptcy case numbers and certain of their current and former business and legal names.

On October 20, 2000, a general unsecured creditors committee and an asbestos claimants committee were appointed in the Debtors' cases by the Office of the United States Trustee. By Order dated September 28, 2001, the Court appointed James J. McMonagle, Esquire, as Legal Representative for Future Claimants.

Hearing Dates and Procedures

By Order dated November 8, 2004, the Court established certain hearing dates and filing deadlines for 2005. Such Order is available below.

Bar Date

The deadline for filing proofs of claim against the Debtors was April 15, 2002. This deadline did not apply to certain excluded claims, including asbestos-related personal injury claims and asbestos-related wrongful death claims, whether or not such claims (a) have been resolved or are subject to resolution pursuant to a settlement agreement, including but not limited to a National Settlement Program ("NSP") Agreement or (b) are based on a judgment. Further information regarding the Bar Date can be obtained from the website "www.occlaims.com".

2019 Statements

By Order dated October 22, 2004, the Court established certain requirements and procedures regarding the filing of Statements pursuant to Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 2019. Such Order is available below.

Plan Status

On October 24, 2003, Owens Corning and its affiliated Debtors and Debtors-in-Possession, together with the Official Committee of Asbestos Claimants and the Legal Representative for Future Claimants, filed their Fourth Amended Joint Plan of Reorganization for Owens Corning and its Affiliated Debtors and Debtors in Possession. A Disclosure Statement with respect to the Fourth Amended Plan was filed on November 21, 2003. By Order dated December 2, 2003, the Bankruptcy Court approved the Disclosure Statement.

The Fourth Amended Joint Plan has not been approved by the Bankruptcy Court, and no dates have been established for (a) the submission of ballots with respect to the Fourth Amended Joint Plan; or (b) the filing of any objections to confirmation of the Fourth Amended Joint Plan.

On June 7, 2004, the Debtors, the Official Committee of Asbestos Claimants and the Legal Representatives for Future Claimants announced that they had executed a term sheet containing their agreement with the Designated Members of the Unsecured Creditors Committee representing Owens Corning's pre-petition bondholders and trade creditors, on the terms of a plan.

Creditors and other parties will be notified in accordance with applicable bankruptcy law of any voting or other deadlines established by the Court with respect to confirmation of a plan of reorganization.

Substantive Consolidation

On October 5, 2004, District Court Judge John P. Fullam issued a decision approving the Debtors' motion to "substantively consolidate" their cases as part of confirmation of a plan of reorganization. Such order is on appeal. On February 7, 2005, oral argument was held on such appeal before the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit. As of the date hereof, no decision has been issued with respect to such appeal.

Asbestos Valuation

An initial hearing to determine the aggregate amount of the Debtors' asbestos personal injury liabilities was held from January 13-20, 2005, before District Court Judge John P. Fullam. On April 1, 2005, Judge Fullam issued a decision estimating Owens Corning's aggregate present and future asbestos liabilities at $7.0 billion.

Motion to Impose Restrictions on Trading of Owens Corning Stock

By Interim Order entered March 1, 2005, the Court imposed certain notice and other restrictions on the trading of Owens Corning equity securities. Objections to such order became final and are due by April 8, 2005 and a further hearing on such matter is scheduled for April 25, 2005. The Court's Interim Order is available below.

General Claims

(Claims other than asbestos-related personal injury claims or asbestos-related wrongful death claims)

The Bankruptcy Court has established April 15, 2002 at 4:00 p.m. prevailing Pacific time (the "General Claims Bar Date") as the deadline for filing certain proofs of claim. This deadline does not apply to Excluded Claims. Click here for a list of types of claims that are Excluded Claims.

The General Claims Bar Date does not apply to asbestos-related personal injury claims and asbestos-related wrongful death claims, whether or not such claims (a) have been resolved or are subject to resolution pursuant to a settlement agreement, including but not limited to a National Settlement Program ("NSP") Agreement or (b) are based on a judgment. Asbestos-related personal injury claims and asbestos-related wrongful death claims will be subject to a separate claim submission process and should not be filed at this time.

The General Claims Bar Date does apply to derivative asbestos claims - asbestos-related claims for contribution, indemnity, reimbursement, or subrogation. The General Claims Bar Date also applies to personal injury or wrongful death claims that are not asbestos-related. A definition of derivative asbestos claims is contained in the Notice of General Claims Bar Date Order.

Claims for property damage (including any claims for property damage arising from the presence of asbestos-containing or other products in buildings) and claims for contribution, indemnity, reimbursement or subrogation, even though such claims may or might arise directly as a result of exposure to asbestos or asbestos-containing products, are required to be filed on or before the General Claims Bar Date.

You should not file any proof of claim that is an Excluded Claim. For a listing of Excluded Claims, click here.

You should not file a Proof of Claim Form if you do not have a claim against any of the Debtors or if your claim has been paid in full or otherwise satisfied.

Asbestos-related personal injury or asbestos-related wrongful death claims will be subject to a separate claims process, to be established by the Court. No deadline has been established for the filing of these claims. These claims should not be filed at this time.

EXECUTORY CONTRACTS AND UNEXPIRED LEASES

CLAIMS AGAINST MULTIPLE DEBTORS

If you assert claims against more than one of the Debtors, you must file a separate Proof of Claim Form against each applicable Debtor. If you file a single Proof of Claim Form which asserts claims against more than one Debtor, your Proof of Claim Form will be deemed to have been filed against the first Debtor identified only. All additional identified Debtors will be disregarded.

Click here for a list of each of the Debtor's bankruptcy case numbers and certain of their current and former business and legal names.

EFFECT OF NOT FILING A CLAIM

If you are required to file a Proof of Claim Form and do not do so on or before the General Claims Bar Date of 4:00 p.m., prevailing Pacific time, April 15, 2002, you will be forever barred, estopped, and enjoined from asserting such claim against any of the Debtors and such Debtors and their property will be forever discharged from any and all indebtedness or liability with respect to such claim, and you will not be permitted to vote on any plan of reorganization or participate in any distribution in such Debtor's chapter 11 case on account of such claim or to receive further notices regarding such claim.

YOU MAY WISH TO CONSULT AN ATTORNEY REGARDING WHETHER YOU HAVE CLAIMS AGAINST ONE OR MORE OF THE DEBTORS, THE GENERAL CLAIMS BAR DATE AND WHETHER YOU SHOULD FILE A PROOF OF CLAIM FORM.

gelatin dessert

By far the most popular use for gelatin products is as gelatin dessert, in the UK gelatin desserts are referred to as jelly, and in the US (where "jelly" is a clear preserve stiffened by pectin and spread on bread) by its trademarked name, Jell-O. Gelatin for desserts is marketed as a flavored powder and sometimes in the form of loosely attached cubes, resembling a wobbly chocolate bar. Popular brands include Jell-O from Kraft Foods in North America and Rowntree's Jelly in the United Kingdom.

Agar

Some gelatinous desserts can be made with agar instead of gelatin, allowing them to congeal quicker and at higher temperatures. Agar, a vegetable product, is used especially in quick jelly powder mix and Asian jelly desserts, but also for vegetarian alternatives. Agar is more closely related to pectin and other gelling plant carbohydrates.

Extraction of collagen

A variety of pre-packaged gelatin dessert products for sale at a supermarket in the U.S. state of Wisconsin in 2004

Animal rendering is a key step in the manufacture of gelatin desserts. Hide trimmings are boiled in 70-foot vats to remove collagen, which is then soaked and filtered. Horns or hooves are not used, as is traditionally thought. The extract is then dried to form a powder, and is mixed with sugar, adipic acid, fumaric acid, disodium acid, sodium citrate, and artificial flavorings and food colors.

Criticism of Kraft

In 1992 the gelatin industry, in particular Kraft's Atlantic Gelatin plant in Woburn, Massachusetts, which supplies the vast majority of Jell-O, came under scrutiny for a history of noxious smells, toxic waste releases into Boston Harbor, and a policy of corporate secrecy. Heading off a rash of local complaints, industry lobbyists invited Massachusetts state representatives Paul Casey and Carol Donovan into the plant. However, the representatives were barred from going past the conference room. Repeated requests for a plant tour by journalists were refused. In 1993 the plant was hit with a $250,000 fine for violating the Clean Air Act of 1970. In a February 4 1996 article, the Associated Press reported that a Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection official was one of only a few outsiders who had seen the inside of the Woburn plant.

Safety

Since collagen is derived from animals, especially cattle, there were concerns about the theoretical spread of mad cow disease to humans. Eating tainted beef has lead to variant Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease (CJ) in humans. There are no known cases of variant CJ transmitted through collagen products such as gelatin.

Trivia

Jell-O is the official state snack food of Utah, which is reported to have the highest per capita sales of green gelatin dessert of any US state.

A Letter to Robicon Customers

New Kensington, Pennsylvania – March 8, 2005 – We are writing today to provide an update concerning our current financial restructuring process, while hopefully addressing questions and concerns you may have regarding the timing of that process and the potential impact to your business.

On February 8, 2005, High Voltage Engineering Corporation and its domestic subsidiaries, including Robicon Corporation, filed voluntary petitions to reorganize under chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code.

On February 18, 2005, the U.S. Bankruptcy Court for the District of Massachusetts approved the appointment of Stephen Gray to the position of Chapter 11 Trustee for High Voltage Engineering ("HVE") and its U.S. debtor subsidiaries, including Robicon. Unlike a Chapter 7 Trustee who is appointed by the Court to "liquidate" assets, Mr. Gray is working directly with Robicon's management team on a plan to escalate production, to obtain additional financing for the business, and to coordinate a timely and efficient sale of the Robicon business to well capitalized purchasers. The CEO and the CFO of HVE resigned shortly after Mr. Gray's appointment, and Mr. Gray has replaced many of the debtors' outside professionals, while maintaining total authority for the various Debtors' businesses, including that of Robicon in New Kensington, PA.

As part of our current restructuring process, Robicon is not going out of business or changing its core business as a leader in industrial power control and the world's largest supplier of medium voltage AC drives. We continue to accept new orders and are manufacturing and shipping products and systems supported by a record customer backlog. In addition, the Bankruptcy Court has authorized us to continue to honor certain customer obligations, including warranty claims. Robicon continues to receive tremendous support from our customer base while we work diligently to protect the value of our business and the ongoing relationships with our customers, suppliers and channel partners.

Mr. Gray's intent is to sell, as going concerns, the various HVE businesses, including Pittsburgh based Robicon Corporation, either separately or together. While it is still early in this process, we have received substantial interest from a wide range of strategic and financial parties and we anticipate that Robicon will be sold in the near future. The sale should provide a permanent solution to Robicon's capitalization needs and provide the necessary foundation for future growth.

The Robicon team is committed to seeing Robicon through the current restructuring and sale process and wishes to thank you for your continued support. We intend to write to you again soon with additional updates.

About High Voltage Engineering

HVE's businesses focus on designing and manufacturing high quality applications and engineered products which are designed to address specific customer needs. HVE has an established customer base spanning more than 60 countries, in a variety of industries including process automation, metal and steel, water and wastewater treatment, petrochemicals, oil and gas extraction and transportation, and semiconductor fabrication.

History of the High Voltage Engineering Corporation

The High Voltage Engineering Corporation (HVEC) was founded by Robert J. Van de Graaff, Denis M. Robinson, and John G. Trump for the production of particle accelerators. The company develops and manufactures particle accelerator systems, electric power regulators, surface analysis instruments, vehicle monitoring equipment, and modular power connectors. It started manufacturing operations in April 1947 and soon began supplying electrostatic generators used in cancer therapy, radiography, and in studies of nuclear structure. By 1967 the corporation included four subsidiaries, Electronized Chemicals Corporation, Glass Grinding Corporation, HVE Europa The Netherlands, and Ion Physics Corporation.

Scope and Contents of Collection

High Voltage Engineering Corporation collection consists for the most part of records, technical notes, and drawings of the company, left by Robert J. Van de Graaff, chief scientist and one of the company's founders, at the time of his death in 1967. The records describe both Van de Graaff's work as a scientist at High Voltage Engineering Corporation between 1947 and 1967, and the development and marketing of research tools during the same period.

The records are arranged into three series.

Series I. Administrative, 1947-1969: consists of routine administrative records of company meetings, annual reports, memoranda, and financial records. Correspondence contains information about filing for patents, including the Van de Graaff generator.

Series II. Technical: includes proposals and reports about various projects including the Tandem accelerator (projects 1961, 1962, n.d.), Owl (Projects 1959), and particle accelerators (1960s).

Technical notes contain Van de Graaff's notes and calculations, and rough drafts about specific projects, some of which are not clearly identified. The projects are organized by date. Records of patents, and reprints are filed chronologically.

Series III. Subject File: describes the range of projects worked on at High Voltage Engineering Corporation. Most of the project files contain Van de Graaff's working notes and drawings, as well as detailed meeting notes. The Research and Development Policy Committee notes give a sense of the kind of work done in preparation for discussion of major projects.

The business side of High Voltage Engineering Corporation is discussed as well in Van de Graaff's notes. Concerns for patenting and marketing, as well as development, document Van de Graaff's activities as an administrator and businessman as well as a scientist.

Of particular interest is a series of memoranda to Denis Robinson from Van de Graaff (Tandem Research Lab #2) on the role of the research laboratory at High Voltage Engineering Corporation, and notes recorded by John L. Danforth of his conversations with Van de Graaff in the mid-1960s.

Bruce L. Cohen, President, established Westgate after serving as CEO of Servisco, which he and his father grew into one of the nation's leading manufacturers of work uniforms. Between the sale of Servisco and his founding of Westgate, Mr. Cohen became an industry consultant to clients that designed and manufactured children's dresses, swimwear, couture, coats, and T-shirts. His understanding of manufacturing, design, importing and distribution, as well as the role financing plays throughout the process, is what shaped Westgate into a unique source of funds.

Apparel Company Sews Up Solution To Labeling Errors

By Kurt C. Hoffman

ARAMARK got an unexpected bonus when its new-found visibility into inbound shipments allowed it to pinpoint more accurately the amount of product it needed to buy

Living up to guaranteed service commitments had become a costly problem for the apparel wholesale division of ARAMARK, thanks to labeling errors on shipments from offshore sewing plants and a lack of visibility to work in process and in transit. A decision last summer to implement Manhattan Associates' infolink solution promises to dramatically reduce these problems and slow to a bare trickle the hard and soft dollar costs associated with them.

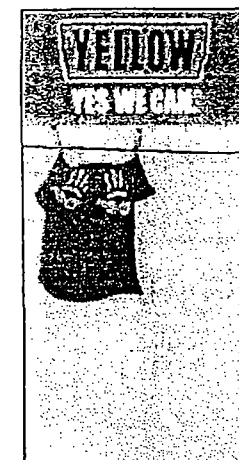

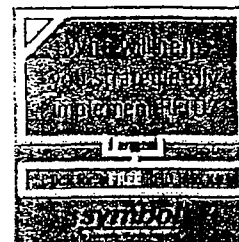

"With infolink up and running at two of our key sew plants, we have virtually eliminated the labeling errors that plagued inbound shipments to our distribution centers," says Gunnar Andersen, head of information technology for the ARAMARK division.

That result was expected. The company got a surprise bonus, however, on the visibility front. "With full vision to work in process at our sew plants and a reliable view of the contents of shipments inbound to our distribution centers, our purchasing managers have been able to dramatically reduce the amount of product they buy from outside vendors to fill real and perceived inventory gaps in time to meet our commitment to turn orders within 24 hours," he says.

ARAMARK provides a broad range of outsourced services to businesses; educational, healthcare and government institutions; and sports, entertainment and recreational facilities. In the fiscal year ended 2001, ARAMARK reported net income of $176.5m on sales of $7.8bn. Over the past five years it has grown at a compound annual rate of 7.6 percent and was included in Fortune magazine's list of "America's Most Admired Companies 2002."

ARAMARK's apparel division manufactures clothing for the company's four uniform-centric business groups. Fabric is cut at ARAMARK facilities in Lawrenceville, Ga., and in Puerto Rico and then sewn at a number of facilities in four countries. Finished goods are shipped in containerload quantities to a network of six primary distribution centers throughout the U.S.

ARAMARK got into the manufacturing business through its acquisition strategy, explains Andersen. "As we acquired different companies in the uniform space, we ended up with the manufacturing arms of those companies," he says. "For the most part, if the particular plant was running well, we would leave it alone." ARAMARK acquired Servisco, a uniform rental company with cutting and sewing facilities in Puerto Rico in 1986, and added Crest Uniform to the family tree in 1995.

However, ARAMARK decided in 1998 that it would gain efficiencies by consolidating and centralizing manufacturing into a single group that would serve all its uniform businesses. That initiative, based and managed in Lawrenceville, was completed by the end of 1999. But ARAMARK was left with different IT systems for tracking shipments from the factories to distribution centers and for monitoring work in progress. "We didn't have common ways of measuring or managing ourselves," Andersen acknowledges.

ARAMARK had two systems for creating and sending advance ship notices. The system at Servisco, installed by ARAMARK in the early 1990s, was traditional EDI and connected through a value-added network — GE Information Services. Transferring messages from the sew plants to the distribution centers was a batch-oriented process that occurred overnight. It also was very expensive and cumbersome to implement. "When we were putting that system into a new facility, it could take months before we could really get it right," says Andersen.

The other system, which came from the Crest operation, was the exact opposite: PC-based and very simple. "It was akin to Excel with macro," says Andersen. "You could type in anything you wanted; there were no edit checks on anything." The system printed labels and shipping manifests based on what had been keyed in, he says. The problem was that "the data might be wrong."

In October 2000, after 11 months of operating in this fragmented manner, ARAMARK decided that things needed to change. "We weren't really planning to undertake a comprehensive supply-chain initiative, but we were having some serious problems with the quality of our labeling coming out of the sew plants," Andersen explains.

There also were problems with the quality of data on shipments to DCs and on work in process. "We did not have visibility into when product was shipped, so we had a lot of people on the phone calling the plants and trying to find out what they were shipping and when they were shipping it and trying to make sure they were hitting the shipping schedule," Andersen says. Shipment notifications either were oral or came in the form of e-mailed spreadsheets. The process was inaccurate and costly and caused a lot of downstream issues at the distribution centers, he says.

Trouble Ticket

"For example, if a sew plant was having problems sending an advance ship notice, it just didn't bother. Their priority was to get that shipment out the door, and then they never got around to actually sending us the ship data," recalls Andersen. "A few days later, we would receive a trouble ticket advising us that a shipment had arrived from a particular sew plant, asking if we knew what it was."

Another problem stemmed from mislabeled packages. A distribution center, for example, might receive an ASN for a product in sizes that the company didn't make, such as a "1XL" instead of "XL." Although a person usually could figure out the difference, the data had to be 100 percent accurate in order for the IT system at the distribution center to properly receive the shipment. "If it was a mistake of the XL/1XL type, the distribution center could create a label," he says. "But if they couldn't figure it out, they would have to get the purchasing department at that particular business unit involved. And if the purchasing department couldn't figure it out, they had to get the manufacturing group in Lawrenceville involved."

ARAMARK maintains a group of people in Lawrenceville charged with tracking work in process, but if the trackers couldn't figure it out, they would have to call the sew plant. "At some point, the IT department here as well as the IT department at the distribution center had to get involved. The number of people who would end up involved was horrendous." Factor in the distance, time zones and language variables as well as the employee hours, and the costs rapidly escalated.

Things had to change. ARAMARK already had a core IT system housed in Lawrenceville that contained all the necessary data, a homegrown system written in 1999-2000 on a Sequel 2000 platform and called the WIP Tracking System (WTS). "We knew what the cut orders were, we knew what the SKUs were. We knew the standard case quantity, the weight, which plant we were giving the work to ... we just needed an internet-based application that the plant could tap into, type in the cut number that they wanted to ship to us, and let the system generate all the case labels and SKUs so there was no ability for the plant to make a mistake," says Andersen. "All they would have to do then is label the product, scan it on the truck, and let the system close the shipment and create all the paperwork."

Flexibility and ease of implementation would be key requirements of the new system. "We wanted a system that wasn't going to cost us $20,000 and three months to install at a site," he explains. "Our organization is very dynamic. When business picks up, we balloon in terms of the number of sew plants with which we do business. We'll grab a bunch of contractors and then cut them back and consolidate them just as fast as business changes, so we didn't necessarily have three months to put in a system. We might be in and out of a plant in three months. Ideally, we wanted a system we could put in anywhere and have it up and running in a week or less."

Accordingly, ARAMARK's IT managers in October 2000 assembled a white paper outlining their vision for the perfect system and circulated it among an identified group of software solution vendors. The company tapped a core group — the directors of operations and IT as well as an IT project manager — to lead the effort and report to a larger committee of executive managers and directors. This group also reported to an IT infrastructure team from ARAMARK's Burbank, Calif., technology facility. The executives' assignment centered on functionality, while the IT team evaluated architecture.

After the first cut, the project team had five solution avenues to consider. Three were vendor products, while the other two options were to develop the solution externally or internally through the IT team in Burbank.

In the final analysis, the ARAMARK project team decided that one vendor relied too heavily on venture capital, and one was an underfunded niche player. Developing the solution externally would come at a staggering expense, and developing it internally would have required the internal IT team's software developers to harness technology with which they had little or no experience.

The team earlier had considered, then rejected, a hosted environment. "This application was going to be too critical to the success and survival of our business. We didn't want to put our future into someone else's hands and risk waking up one day to find that the company was out of business and suddenly we had no way to track work in process or communicate with customers or ship or label," Andersen explains. "That would be an absolute nightmare, especially when you consider that we operate in four countries, several different time zones, seven days a week. We needed to be in a position where if the vendor went out of business, at least we would have the hardware and software under our control.”

In the end, ARAMARK selected Atlanta-based Manhattan Associates and its infolink concept. “A concept was all they had at the time, but the concept was perfect for us,” he adds. Manhattan and ARAMARK already enjoyed a pre-existing relationship, as ARAMARK had been running Manhattan’s warehouse system at the Crest distribution center in Virginia. “For us, they already were a valuable and strategic partner.”

The vision white paper specified that the new system would use the same data as the WIP Tracking System at Lawrenceville, so any updates the sew plants made to the data base would be in real time. But Manhattan convinced ARAMARK to replicate the WTS database and simultaneously feed updates from WTS to infolink. One benefit of this approach was that it protected the sew plants from maintenance activity on the WTS. “When we thought about it, that was a much better idea,” says Andersen. “We have plants running from 7 a.m. to 11 p.m. seven days a week, printing labels all the time. If we were using the exact same database, we would have to coordinate with sew plants in four different countries whenever we needed to do software or data base upgrades.”

Implementation began in June 2001. First up was the company’s sew plant in Fresnillo, Mexico, which had been using the aforementioned simple application to dispatch ASNs to the appropriate Crest distribution centers. “We put it in our most difficult plant first, which is not an ideal way to start, but we had to do it for our own business purposes,” says Andersen. Next up was the site in Puerto Rico, in December. After several weeks of operations at both facilities, ARAMARK came back to Manhattan with a series of programming changes to be implemented prior to the rollout to the entire plant community.

Unexpected Gains

The initial results from Fresnillo and Puerto Rico exceeded expectations on the ARAMARK side of the equation. “We estimated that this particular project would pay for itself six months after going online. We cost-justified the investment just based on straightening out and getting control over what was shipping north,” Andersen says.

However, the company underestimated the potential gains from eliminating labeling errors, gaining visibility and improving ease of operations. For example, the Puerto Rico facility is a high-volume operation where fabric is stacked 208 layers high on cutting tables measuring approximately 62 inches by 40 yards. A single production run generally yields 400 cases of product. With the old system, operators would have to key into their system every single SKU that they wanted, the number of cases for each SKU, the number of pieces for each case, and print the labels individually. Then, after they scanned all of that onto the truck, they would have to interface with the value-added network to transmit their ASNs and other shipping information. Sometimes the phone lines weren’t working, sometimes there were problems in Burbank where communications were exchanged with GE Information Services. Now, operators at the Puerto Rico plant simply type in the cut number, hit return and the appropriate number of labels are printed. As outbound cartons are scanned onto the truck, infolink updates both databases.

ASN errors no longer are an issue in Mexico. “One of the great successes has been at Fresnillo,” says Andersen. “Their priority always had been to get product out the door no matter what type of problems it caused downstream. Now, we’re stopping every problem right there at the plant before the product begins its northward movement.”

On the error front, the Fresno facility had an average error rate of 10 percent to 15 percent on case labels. That meant that for every containerload shipment — 1,000 to 1,500 cases — from that plant, ARAMARK had as many as 100 to 200 cases that required the involvement of multiple people to figure out what exactly was in the cartons and to get them labeled correctly before they could be received at the appropriate distribution center. Soft dollar costs per shipment were significant.

"When we did our ROI analysis and I stood in front of the executives and made my promises, I told them we should never expect to be able to get past 98 percent accuracy from Fresno," says Andersen. "But with the very first shipment that left Fresno on Oct. 25, we experienced no errors in product labeling. Zero. Now, I thought we eventually could get to zero, but there we were, right off the bat."

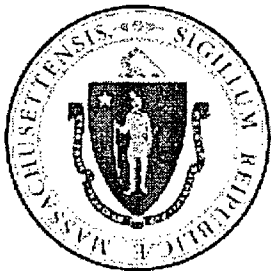

Now, the trackers spend no time looking into shipments from Fresno or Puerto Rico. The division's IT team only has to look in one place for ASN data, and a purchasing manager on the road can tap into the system and determine the status and location of a critical product on backorder, or see what's in the pipeline and available to promise. And they can do this using a PC outside the ARAMARK firewalls.

And then there are the unanticipated benefits related to open-market purchases of goods. "Before infolink, the distribution centers had no visibility into northbound shipments. Now, we can see our inbound shipments with reliability," says Anderson. As a result, the company promises against in-transit stock instead of acquiring additional goods to meet order commitments within is 24-hour turn time.

When the project team put together the white paper and request for proposal, they were totally focused on the ASN problem. "As we started taking the show on the road and made people inside the organization aware of what we were doing, a whole group of 'wannabe' users of infolink sprung up," says Andersen. "As an IT guy, my first thought was, 'I didn't size the servers right.' We sized them for the sew plants, not for a whole group of supply-chain people who want to know what's inside the sew plants so they can make long-term contract arrangements with other suppliers, or the distribution centers that want to know what's coming at them. Now, we have a larger community of potential users of infolink than we ever imagined."
